I don't have faith that Microsoft is thinking about us gamers and making changes on the right road. Xbox is such a failure there, I don't think Sony has any reason to make changes. You've tried everything you can to help the Xbox users and you're still standing alone. Share this post Link to post Share on other sites I really hope this is the start of a great (and speedy) solution. I hope Sony and Microsoft join together on this but I doubt it. I feel it's going to just be another big hassle for Xbox Live users and the PSN console owners.

I'm glad Xbox 360 owners don't have to worry about this. They knew what they were getting into, and even so, I really felt sorry for e79caf774b

Android: Handle multiple devices I just read a book about Android Development and it suggests to handle multiple devices within your code. So if you want to understand more about this read the book. I now want to test multiple devices, so if I have different Devices, how can I define my emulator folder so I can download all my correct device settings? I need to define a folder for every device (Maybe this step is not needed, but that's how I thought it should work). Do I need to install a new emulator for every device? When I press the button to launch my app it says "Unfortunately the app has stopped working". Do I need a different version for every device so I can upload to market? A: Emulator folder is relative to the AVD, not the project. So your path would be projectDirectory/AVD/android-sdk/tools/emulator/etc/emulator/device-x.y.z/. So if you have a projectDirectory, just create a directory like android-sdk/tools/emulator/ and put the AVD folder there. 1. Technical Field

The present invention relates to liquid compositions for treatment of skin and/or of the keratinization process, intended in particular for cosmetic, pharmaceutical, perfumery or chemical compositions intended to cover or treat the skin
